

Maheta Molango

Maheta Molango was former CEO of Spanish LaLiga professional soccer club Real Mallorca and a member of Baker McKenzie Advisory Board in Madrid.

He was appointed CEO of the club in January 2016 after Real Mallorca was bought by a group of US investors led by Robert Sarver and Andy Kohlberg (owners of the Phoenix Suns) and Steve Nash (2-time NBA MVP).

Prior to joining Real Mallorca, Maheta was a lawyer at Baker McKenzie in Madrid (Spain) specialised in labour / employment law, as well as sports law, admitted to practice in Spain and New York (USA).

Maheta still teaches several courses on a part-time basis at Universidad Pontificia Comillas, Centro de Estudios Garrigues and other universities. He is also a guest speaker at New York University (Madrid campus).

Prior to joining Baker McKenzie, Maheta played soccer at a professional level for several European clubs, including Atletico Madrid, Wacker Burghausen and Brighton & Hove Albion. After his playing career came to an end, he still remained linked to the soccer world, as he worked for Charlton Athletic as a scout for the Spanish market and was a guest commentator on Real Madrid TV's international channel.